Unique Building of Science at Wisconsin

The Biotron, new controlled-climate facility for plant and animal (including human) experimentation at the University of Wisconsin.

SCIENTIFIC studies are now under way in the Biotron, the University of Wisconsin's controlled-climate facility that is probably the only building of its kind in the world.

In 1958, the National Science Foundation (NSF) conceived the idea for an environmentally-controlled building for plant and animal (including human) experimentation. After studying proposals from many American institutions, NSF granted $1.5 million to the University of Wisconsin to plan and construct a Biotron.

Biotron control and data acquisition systems simultaneously compare the climatic conditions of all rooms with the desired conditions for each. If discrepancies occur, commands are sent to correct the "weather" in a room by, for example, electrical "messages" to valves in cooling pipe lines.

Seasonal changes of light, temperature and humidity—caused by varying angles of sunlight striking our orbiting earth—can be produced in the Biotron and superimposed upon daily cycles. Seasonal cycles of Venus and Mars can also be simulated.

Fresh air systems take in 13,000 cubic feet per minute of outside air, filter out dust and pollutant gases, adjust temperature and humidity, and then channel the air to the Biotron's 48 different rooms. Parallel systems remove air from these rooms. During this process of air exchange the temperature in the rooms changes less than a half degree.

Winds of cyclone velocity with variables of light, temperature and humidity can be produced to study the effects of these different conditions upon plants and animals.

Death Valley's searing heat and moving weather fronts, for example, can be simulated in one of the experimental study rooms.

A crossed gradients room will furnish light ranging from low intensity at one wall, to light of progressively higher intensity, to the highest intensity at the opposite wall. At right angles to the light intensity gradient is a similar temperature gradient. Thus, ideal light and temperature for growth and development of plants and animals can be determined.

Softeners purify water for steam humidifying and for a plant nutrient solution piped to plants grown without soil. No soil is allowed in the Biotron—to prevent the entrance of insects, bacteria, fungi and other contaminants.

In addition, to prevent contamination of experiments, no one but the Biotron staff and researchers will be allowed to enter the sealed rooms. Anyone entering the Biotron will usually have to shower and change clothes.

The sealed rooms have fiberglass walls filled with thermal-insulating polyurethane foam. The walls can be torn out and rebuilt to make rooms of different sizes.

Electrical distribution, communication, signal and piping systems on the third floor regulate light, temperature and humidity in the rooms below. Electrical demands will total about one-fifth of the electrical power used by the University.

Planning and operation of the Biotron is directed by Prof. Harold A. Senn.

Funds for construction of the machine-like building total more than $4.8 million from the National Science Foundation, National Institutes of Health, Ford Foundation, and the State of Wisconsin.

Low Cost Electricity from Natural GAS!

Here, in sight of the stadium, is one of the nation's foremost examples of Gas Total Energy — an amazing and practical new system of heating, lighting and cooling a large building or building complex by Natural Gas.

Gas engines, located on the 24th floor of each tower, drive generators to produce the electricity used throughout the tower. Heat from the operation of these engines is recovered and used for heating, cooling and water heating.

The Ohio State University has taken a bold new approach in its twin tower dorms and their unique yet practical use of Natural Gas. Gas Total Energy has an exciting future in many commercial and industrial applications. And, as in the past, Natural Gas continues to serve you better... for less... throughout your own modern home.

Squad of 1917 Holds 50-Year Reunion

OHIO STATE UNIVERSITY'S second Big Ten football championship was won by the squad of 1917, whose members today are observing a 50th anniversary reunion.

This team had the remarkable distinction of not having its goal line crossed. Only six points, on two field goals, were scored against the conference champions.

Only 31 players were on the squad and 15 were awarded letters. Eight others received the OAA (junior award). Several members of the team had played in 1916 when the Buckeyes won their first title.

All-American Charles W. (Chic) Harley led the team to eight victories, (a post-season scoreless tie was played with Auburn). Harley likewise had been named an all-American in 1916, Ohio State's first selection to the mythical team.

It was the Wisconsin game that was regarded as highlight of the 1917 season. An early 3-3 tie with the Badgers at Madison suddenly became a 16 to 3 Buckeye victory when forward passes, with Harley as the hub of action, decided the issue.

Other Big Ten triumphs were 40 to 0 over Northwestern; 26 to 3 over Indiana and 13 to 0 against Illinois.

Non-conference victories were 49 to 0 over Case, 53 to 0 over Ohio Wesleyan; 67 to 0 over Denison and 28 to 0 over Camp Sherman of Chillicothe. The games with Camp Sherman and Auburn were played in Columbus after the regular season as part of a World War I sports program.

Those present today are Harley, Pete Stinchcomb, R. L. Myers, Dwight Peabody, Charley Seddon, Frank Schweitzer, W. E. Cramer, Mark Fuller, W. E. Metzger, L. E. Miller, R. H. Wasson and Dr. A. J. Nemecek.

An accurate wristwatch requires coordination too. The minute hand must know what the second hand is doing.

Roy's Jewelers practices "timepiece teamwork." They "coach" their wristwatches with a specially designed electronic timer to assure accurate and precise performance. A wristwatch from Roy's is precision-g geared, just like a winning football team . . . Except Roy's isn't interested in playing games.

Why not investigate the exciting array of precision wristwatches available at Roy's. Ask about Longines, the official watch for Ohio State University home football games.

Team up with time at Roy's . . . be part of a winning combination.

Isaly's Wonderful World of Ice Cream

IN 1910, our Founder, William Isaly, first made Ice Cream by hand-churning fresh cream and sugar in a wooden tub packed with ice and salt. Today, we freeze and package Ice Cream in our modern plants using the finest and most expensive ingredients, the strictest laboratory controls, and the skillful know-how of experienced employees. The result is an Ice Cream of fine quality and creamy goodness that is truly distinctive.

Science Changes Career of Surveyor

Geodetic Standard Baseline is First on North American Continent

Dr. T. J. Kukkamaki, director of the Finnish Geodetic Institute, adjusts telescope through which he observes light beams with which Ohio State University's new precise base line near Mansfield, O., was measured. The only geodetic standard base line in North America and the sixth in the world, the facility was measured by a light interference technique in which distances are compared with a standard quartz meter rod mounted in the instrument.

SCIENCE has brought the surveyor quite a ways down the road from the day of the old country mile.

At least, this is the case when you consider a device now in operation on the Mansfield, O., campus of Ohio State University.

Consisting of seven concrete pillars set at certain exact intervals along a 600-meter (nearly 200-feet) pathway, the instrument is the first geodetic standard baseline on this continent and the sixth in the world.

The pillars are about three feet high and down to as much as 10 feet in the ground. They are on a 300 by 2000-foot plot of ground at the west end of the Mansfield campus on the city's northwest edge.

Ohio State scientists are able to measure the baseline to paper-thin accuracy (within about one part in 10 million). And with this high accuracy, surveyors tapes, invar wires, and electronic distance-measuring equipment can be calibrated for various agencies or organizations.

According to Prof. S. H. Laurila of the university's department of geodetic science, who is supervising the project with S. F. Cushman, instructor, the baseline will be used principally for instruction and demonstration in geodesy, and will provide additional research facilities for graduate students.

Dr. Laurila also foresees that the baseline might be used in conjunction with laser-type instrumentation to obtain more accurate measurements of the velocity of light.

He said that the baseline's pillars must be set in sand and gravel soil, to diminish movement caused by freezing of the ground or by other earth shifting.

Once the pillars are in place, the baseline had to be precisely measured with an instrument called a Vaisala comparator, which employs a standard quartz meter as its basis of measurement.

By observing interference patterns set up between two light beams, the operator can "step off" segments of a prescribed pathway that are equal to or multiples of the standard meter.

After the length of the baseline is first measured, Dr. Laurila said, it must be frequently checked against the standard meter to detect any possible change.

The baseline will have a number of uses; for precision map-making of both the earth and the moon, for satellite mapping, and for determining the size and shape of the earth.

One anticipated use is to make a new and more accurate determination of the speed of light, which has not yet been done with sufficient accuracy to satisfy today's demands for precision applications in satellite computations and space travel.

Other baselines are in Argentina, the Netherlands, Portugal, and a double one in Germany. All of them have been calibrated by a light interference technique developed by the Finnish geodesist Yrjo Vaisala in 1922.

AMERICAN HERITAGE

Situation and Music

Most persons traveled to this new land with ideas and hopes to be Born Free.

The song Yankee Doodle seems to capture the spirit surrounding the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Shenandoah is characteristic of the music of a people with the urge to spread out and settle a new country and begin a new life.

Always vigilant through the years, in the hope to keep a free people free, is the American Patrol.

Today we pay special tribute to the veterans of the United States of America Armed Forces.

A Referee in Trouble

by CLIFFORD H. SHAW

Retired Southwest Conference Official, as told to Orville Henry

A REFEREE in trouble has to rely on common sense and a smile.

I'll never forget the first time a touchdown was awarded a ball-carrier loose in the open who was felled by an opponent who came off the opposing bench to make the illegal tackle at the sideline.

It was an explosive moment. Rice was playing Alabama in the 1954 Cotton Bowl and the score was tied 6-6 in the second quarter. Seventy-five thousand fans jammed the Dallas bowl and millions more were watching on national television.

Rice had the ball back on its 5. Dickie Moegle, Rice's All-American back, with one of the quick moves for which he was famous darted into the open down the right sideline. A radio announcer whom I shall not identify described the play as follows:

"Moegle takes a pitchout in the end zone. He's almost trapped—no!—he's back to the 5, the 10, the 15. He cuts suddenly to the right sideline. Now he's in the open! He's past the 20, the 30, the 40! He's loose for a touchdown! He's . . ." (several seconds of silence).

Then the announcer, in plain hearing of his whole radio audience, muttered softly, meekly and incredulously to himself, "Where the hell did he come from?"

The "he" was Tommie Lewis, Alabama fullback. As Moegle passed the 'Bama bench, Lewis was charged so high emotionally that he jumped onto the field and leveled Moegle with a body block. Jack Freeman, the head-linesman, called the infraction. Lewis was easily detected because he wasn't wearing a helmet when he struck Moegle.

As referee, I had to act fast. There was a rule on the books that said if a play be interfered with by some act palpably unfair and not elsewhere prohibited in the rules, "the referee may make such ruling as in his judgment justice may require."

I ruled a 95-yard touchdown for Moegle. The situation was helped magnificently when on the try for extra point, each Rice player, before lining up, stepped across the scrimmage line and shook hands with an Alabama player.

At its next meeting, the national rules committee backed up my improvisation by incorporating it in the rules.

My most embarrassing moment as a referee happened in a Thanksgiving game between Texas and Texas A&M played in a light drizzle. I had stuffed my pockets full of towels so the players could use them in the huddles to dry their hands. This left no room in my pockets for my red flag so I would simply throw one of the towels to indicate infractions.

The Texas quarterback faded with the ball, trying to retreat into the pocket to throw a forward pass. I detected a foul by one of the offensive guards. I threw the towel just as the passer was getting set to look for his receivers. The wind spread the towel out flat, like a magic carpet, and it settled over the passer's head, blinding him temporarily. The defense was on him.

He reacted courageously. Throwing off the towel, he tucked the ball under his arm, ran a right end sweep and gained 12 yards. Even an official couldn't foul it up for him. But for a long time I had nightmares wondering what I would have done had he been tackled with the towel over his face, or if he had fumbled, or if a dozen other things had happened.

Another time when I was refereeing a Baylor game at Waco, I threw a red flag for an illegal use of the hands penalty and followed the play, a sweep, to its conclusion on the sideline. Looking around for my red flag, I saw an amazing sight.

One of Baylor's bear cub mascots had slipped out of its chained collar, dashed onto the field, grabbed the red flag and was ambling towards the end zone with it, tossing it into the air, batting it with a forepaw, then grabbing it and continuing its trip to the goal.

The fans broke up in laughter and of course to inflict the penalty we had to guess at the spot of the foul.

My most heartwarming moment as an official occurred in a Texas-Texas A&M game at Austin. A Texas drive had reached the Cadet 30-yard line and on fourth down the Longhorns carried the ball almost to the point needed for a first down. We called for the chain to make the measurement. As I dropped to one knee to get a better view of the chain stake and the end of the ball, I realized somebody else was helping me make the decision.

A small boy, possibly nine or ten years old, had come onto the field and stretched himself out full-length on his stomach with his nose three feet from the ball.

I got down with him, put one arm around his shoulders, and together we looked at this thing that involved about one-fourth inch. We talked it over and both decided it was a first down and he returned to the stands. The fans laughed extravagantly over the enthusiasm of one small boy. Because of it, a lot of people went home happier that day.

I'll close with a Colorado-Kansas State game. I had just disqualified a big, rugged end. His captain was disenchanted with him and as he walked away with him to the bench, I heard the captain say, "Come back and apologize to the referee."

"Tell the referee to go to hell," the end growled and kept walking.

The captain came back to me. "Mr. Referee, he said to tell you he was sorry."

"Yes, I heard him," I replied and we both enjoyed a good laugh.

Because Gant believes:

a shirt is ...

Sabre Striped Oxford

Let's not parry—a shirt is more than a sheath to wear a tie with. It's a weapon to stimulate you. This is why Gant puts verve, spirit and color into this Sabre Striped Oxford button-down. Tailored with singular precision...patently Gant. Trim Hugger body. In blue, pumpkin or chamois—all with color-framed stripes. About $8 at discerning stores. Our Sports Department

A look of bold innovation and the feel of competitive excitement set Chevrolet sport models apart from the pack for '68.

Revolutionary styling.

Looking like a dream car come to life, the '68 Corvette Sting Ray is an astonishingly beautiful new sports car. It's nearly seven inches longer and two inches lower. Startling new features include Hide-A-Way windshield wipers concealed beneath a power-operated cowl panel, rear deck spoiler, high-backed bucket seats and push-type door opening buttons.

Great performers, too.

Quieter and smoother riding this year, Chevelle and Camaro,

"The Hugger," offer new sports car-type performance—better handling, big engines. Camaro SS has a bulging striped hood that covers your choice of either a 350- or 396-cubic-inch V8.

Chevelle SS 396 for '68 has completely new styling, a wider tread, shorter wheelbase, and a twin-domed hood.

More engine efficiency.

Standard on many models with automatic transmission is an ingenious carburetor heater that gives you increased efficiency in cold weather. Standard, also, is a new GM exhaust emission control.

New ventilation system.

Astro Ventilation, a brand-new system of bringing in outside air, comes on Corvette, Camaro and the Caprice Coupe, and is available on many other models.

Proved safety features.

All Chevrolet safety features are continued and you get many new ones such as energy-absorbing front seat backs and side marker lights for '68. Be smart. Be sure. Buy now at your Chevrolet dealer's.
